

A Training Programme on Bullying

A Workshop for Teaching Assistants and Lunchtime Supervisors Working in Schools

Trainer - Shirley Rose

Aims:

To enable support staff to recognise bullying and to work more effectively with the children involved.

Learning Objectives:

By the end of this training, participants will start to attain:

- An understanding of what constitutes bullying.
- Greater knowledge of their school's anti - bullying policy and how it particularly relates to their practice.
- An understanding of a whole school approach to bullying.
- Strategies and skills to work with perpetrator and victims
- An understanding of when it is appropriate to pass incidents on to the appropriate teaching staff
- Practical ways to make lunchtime safer and more constructive.
- Knowledge of support networks for pupils who experience bullying- e.g. Peer Support Schemes.

The Training

On average 1 in 4 primary school pupils more than once in any one-term (Whitney and Smith 1993) Most bullying takes place during lunchtimes and break times. This course is designed to focus on the Particular needs of support staff to tackle this problem. I aim to make the training session relaxed and Non-threatening. Training methods employed in this programme are flexible and include large and small group discussion, exercises and formal teaching. All participants will receive handouts and a certificate.

The Trainer

I am a free-lance trainer working with support staff in London primary schools. I have extensive experience in teaching counselling skills to groups. I have also designed and delivered training courses in a range of child related subjects including child protection, equal opportunities for support staff, communicating with children, behaviour management, working with refugee children, and peer support.

Cost
